CALL FOR ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEMBERS

The National Collaborating Centre for Indigenous Health (NCCIH) is seeking new members to serve on its Advisory Committee. We invite expressions of interest from First Nations, Inuit, and Métis individuals across Canada who are committed to improving public health and health equity for Indigenous Peoples.

About the NCCIH

Established in 2005 and hosted by the University of Northern British Columbia (UNBC) on the traditional territory of the Lheidli T'enneh First Nation, the NCCIH is one of six National Collaborating Centres for Public Health funded by the Public Health Agency of Canada. As the only population-based collaborating centre, the NCCIH's mandate is to strengthen public health systems and support health equity for First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Peoples through knowledge translation and exchange. The Centre works to promote public health policy and research that reflects the distinct and diverse needs, experiences, and worldviews of Indigenous Peoples.

About the Advisory Committee

The Advisory Committee members draw from their experiences and backgrounds in healthcare and public health to shape the NCCIH near-future and long-term goals. Committee members contribute to the exploration of current health issues, the identification of emerging priorities, and the development of strategic work plans that guide NCCIH activities.

Membership details

We are seeking individuals who can bring experience and insight from community-based work, research, policy, or practice related to Indigenous public health.

- Members serve a three-year term, with the option to renew for a second term.
- Members are required to attend two in-person meetings per year (travel expenses will be covered by the NCCIH).
- Members provide advice on the NCCIH's Strategic Plan and its annual work plans.

How to apply

To apply, please submit a one-page letter of interest outlining:

- Your background and biographical information.
- Why you wish to serve on the NCCIH Advisory Committee.
- Please send your letter by December 8, 2025 to:
