CALL FOR YOUTH ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Are you a First Nations, Inuit, or Métis youth between the ages of 18 and 35 who is passionate about the health and well-being of your community? The National Collaborating Centre for Indigenous Health (NCCIH) is seeking young Indigenous representatives interested in leadership from across Canada to join its Advisory Committee.

About the NCCIH

Established in 2005 and hosted by the University of Northern British Columbia (UNBC) on the traditional territory of the Lheidli T'enneh First Nation, the NCCIH is one of six National Collaborating Centres for Public Health funded by the Public Health Agency of Canada. The NCCIH's mandate is to strengthen public health systems and promote health equity for First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Peoples through knowledge translation and exchange.

About the Advisory Committee

The NCCIH Advisory Committee provides guidance and insight on Indigenous public health issues, emerging priorities, and strategic directions. Members share their experiences and ideas to help shape the work of the NCCIH and ensure it reflects the realities of Indigenous communities across Canada.

Youth are vital to shaping the future of Indigenous health and well-being

By joining the Advisory Committee, you will have the opportunity to:

- contribute your voice and ideas to national conversations on Indigenous public health;
- learn from and work alongside experienced leaders, Elders, and researchers;
- strengthen your leadership and advocacy skills; and
- inform the NCCIH's strategic work.

Membership details

- Members serve a 2-year term, with the option to renew for another term.
- Members are required to attend two in-person meetings per year (travel expenses are covered by the NCCIH).
- Members provide advice on the NCCIH's Strategic Plan and its annual work plans.

How to apply

To apply, please submit a one-page letter of interest that includes:

- Your background and a short biography.
- Why you want to be part of the NCCIH Advisory Committee as a youth member.
- Please email your letter by
